The Legacy of Delta Wye Group

Delta Wye Group was built on a strong foundation of service, integrity, and hard work that began in 2011 with Lee and Karen Cowling. In October of 2011, Lee and Karen established Cowling Electric PLLC. Through their leadership, the company earned a reputation for honest work, dependable service, and treating customers and employees like family. What started as a local electrical contractor steadily grew through a commitment to doing the job the right way, standing behind the work, and building lasting relationships throughout Arkansas communities and businesses. In 2017, Jonathan Cupples joined the Cowling Electric team. Starting initially as a junior project estimator and job lead he became a project manager in late 2018 when David Hickman retired. Jonathan built several relationships in early 2019 that would lead in to a large scale project in late 2019. Jonathan took over primary operations in 2020 with the start of COVID-19. Under Lee Cowling's guidance and Jonathan's persistence Cowling Electric was able to navigate the unknown future that the pandemic brought.

In 2022, Jonathan Cupples purchased the company with a vision of preserving that legacy while preparing it for the future. As operations expanded and new opportunities developed, Delta Wye Group was officially founded in July of 2025 through a partnership formed with the intention of expanding into commercial construction, HVAC, and controls work alongside electrical service operations. The goal was to create a company capable of offering broader building solutions while maintaining the responsiveness and customer-focused approach that built the original company's reputation.

In January of 2026, the two partners returned to focus on their own company and continue pursuing their independent vision, while Jonathan continued forward as sole owner of Delta Wye Group. During that transition, the company formally rebranded under the Delta Wye Group name and sharpened its focus on commercial and residential electrical service, national accounts, emergency response, lighting retrofits, and facility support throughout Arkansas and beyond.

Today, Delta Wye Group continues to flourish with the belief that good service is about more than just wires and equipment. Our mission is centered around responsiveness, professionalism, accountability, and building trust with every customer we serve. Whether responding to an emergency service call in the middle of the night, supporting large commercial facilities, or helping a homeowner solve a problem, our goal remains the same: provide dependable electrical solutions while treating people with honesty, respect, and urgency. We believe in answering the phone, showing up when we say we will, and leaving every customer better taken care of than when they called.
